The new Goal Day program will include several metric-based goals. One of the metrics to be included in the April program, which will award a Goal Day in May, is fuel response limited to seven minutes.

Metric-based Goal Days to be monthly

TSgt. Patricia Collins
NCOIC, public affairs

A revised Goal Day program will be implemented beginning in April that will allow for a monthly Goal Day instead of the current quarterly one. Recognition for the Goal Day will be received the following month.

According to Capt. Vergil Simpson, chief of the manpower and quality management office, the revised program puts an emphasis on mission accomplishment and focuses on metrics that all Lajes personnel should strive to improve.

Each month the executive council will choose three or four metrics presented by the various group commanders. These metrics will be used to determine the Goal Day. Each of them must be met for the base populace to receive the Goal Day.

Each metric, according to Simpson, must be achievable and marketable. Some metrics may have a year-end goal in mind which will be met by monthly increments.

"This means we must set a realistic goal," said Simpson. "We don't want to set ourselves up for failure, but at the same time we must make progress on the established metrics. We also want everyone to know what the metrics are and how they fit in with achieving the various goals."

There are two objectives to the program:

- Mission accomplishment: improve on metrics that need to get better
- Ensure each Team Lajes member has a stake in the mission

The four metrics for the month of

Club, AAFES help wing celebrate 180 days DUI free

The Top of the Rock Club and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service is helping the wing and base celebrate 180 days of DUI-free driving with a barbecue Wednesday from 5 to 9 p.m. at the club.

The meal will be a barbecue beef buffet with the trimmings. A hot dog buffet bar will also be available.

The barbecue is free to Lajes drivers license holders with a valid club card; club card holders who do not have a drivers license must pay $3. Non-club card holders with a drivers license pay $3 while non club card holders without a drivers license must pay $6. Children ages 6 and up pay $3 and it is free to children ages 5 and under.

For more information, call Ext. 23202.

April, for a Goal Day in May are:

- Maximizing IMPAC card use - at least 75 percent of all eligible purchases must be made on the IMPAC card.
- Ninety percent duty status reporting
- Fuel response time limited to seven minutes
- DNA - improve DNA testing to 95 percent of assigned active-duty personnel

"While everyone may not have a direct input to each of these metrics, it's important to realize this is a team effort," said Simpson. "We must do our best to help achieve whatever part of the current metrics that we can."

Some metrics may remain the same each month while others change.

For more information, call the manpower and quality management office at Ext. 26280.

Electric transfer for cottage owners to begin in April

Commentary
1st Lt. Wendy Dysle
65th Civil Engineer Squadron

The transfer of cottage electrical service from the base to the local utility company, Empresa de Electricidade dos Azores (EDA) is underway.

The transfer will happen over a 15 month period beginning in April and ending in July 1999. If a cottage owner's estimated return from overseas date falls within these dates, the transfer will most likely be scheduled for the DEROS.

There will be some exceptions to this rule based on the availability of base supplied compatible appliances.

Cottage owners should be receiving a letter with a preliminary list showing approximate transfer dates. This list is not an official notification.

Cottage owners will be notified at least two months prior to their date of transfer, and will receive the conversion package prior to notification.

The total estimated cost of converting a cottage will range from $500 to $800. These costs include EDA's connection fee, the whole house transformer cost, meter box and disconnect switch installation, flash heater installation (for those with electric hot water heaters), and gas line installations (for those with electric dryers and ovens).

The civil engineer squadron has been researching the details of converting cottage power and is preparing a package to assist cottage owners in the conversion.

Troy State out, new graduate program to arrive at Lajes

Headquarters U.S. Air Forces in Europe has recently announced the following colleges and universities were awarded contracts to operate educational programs at military bases throughout Europe - and by extension to Lajes and Iceland as well.

University of Maryland — Will offer lower and upper-level liberal arts programs including multimedia delivery; and lower level vocational-technical programs. A masters in computer information systems, public administration and counseling has also been approved.

City Colleges of Chicago — Will offer lower-level liberal arts multimedia delivery.

Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University — Will offer lower and upper level aeronautical instruction and a masters in aeronautical science.

Oklahoma University — Will offer a masters in business/MBA, human resources management, education, international relations and a doctorate in interdisciplinary studies.

According to Patrick O'Donnell, education services officer, for Lajes the new contracts mean that the current graduate program will Troy State University will be phased out sometime this summer and a new graduate program will be brought to the base.

"To assist in deciding which program to bring to Lajes, we're conducting a needs assessment survey so the personal and professional needs of the base population can be determined," he said.

O'Donnell said everyone is asked to participate in the survey and forms can be picked up at the education center, family support center, library and community center.

For more information, call the education center at Ext. 23355.

March: Women's History Month

Commentary by Anne Saul

Lajes Federal Federal Women's Program Manager

March is Women's History Month, and this year it marks the 150th anniversary of the women's rights movement.

The history of women's rights movement in the United States is traced back to July 1848 when five women sat down to afternoon tea. Their conversation turned to the inequality of women in American society. U.S. women in the 1800's couldn't vote, become doctors or lawyers or go to a university or college. Married women had no property rights.

Women decided to hold a convention "to discuss the social, civil and religious condition and rights of woman." History doesn't record how many attended that convention but it does record the changes to society which put women in areas formerly reserved for men.

In 1867, cigar makers were the first national union to accept women. The 1870's saw the first woman admitted to the bar, but it was nine years later that the first woman lawyer was admitted to practice law before the U.S. Supreme Court. In 1910, women won the right to vote in Washington. The right for women to vote in national elections was won in 1919. In 1924, the first woman governor was elected in the Wyoming. Franklin Roosevelt had the first woman cabinet member in 1933 when Frances Perkins became the Secretary of Labor.

A massive government and industry media campaign in 1941 encouraged women to work in support of the war. Nearly 7 million women join the work force and 400,000 joined the military; many lost their jobs in 1945 when the war ended. In 1955, women earned about 63 cents for every dollar earned by men. The Equal Pay Act, in 1963 established equal pay for people performing the same jobs.

The next year, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act established the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to investigate complaints concerning discrimination by civil employers, employment agencies and unions. The commission averaged about 10,000 complaints a year for the first five years.

The group, Federally Employed Women, was founded in 1968 to end "gender-based discrimination in civil service jobs."

In 1981, President James Carter established the first "National Women's History Week" in March with March 8 as "International Women's Day." Six years later, Congress declared March as National Women's History Month.

In celebration of Women's History Month, the Lajes Federal Women's Program is sponsoring several activities including an essay contest being held in the junior and senior high schools. The theme is, "Living the Legacy of Women's Rights."

The FWP is sponsoring "Take Your Child to Work" Day Monday. The program is for children ages 8 through high school. It's offered as an opportunity to observe positive women role models in the workplace. Anyone who wants to participate should call MSgt. Deb Huntley at Ext. 25240.

The Lajes Federal Women's Program is open to all base employees: military and civilian, Portuguese and U.S.

The FWP generally meets once a month, usually the second Friday of the month. Meetings are considered an official function and you do not have to take leave to attend them.

Exchange authorized shoppers

Recently a dependent of a local civilian was caught shoplifting in the exchange. Can you clarify who exactly is allowed to shop in the exchange? In most overseas locations authorization to shop in the exchange is limited. Why not here? Also, I've been trying to get a phone cord at the exchange and am constantly told it will arrive on the next boat. However there is plenty of phone cord for European phones yet none for American phones. Why the disparity in the ordering system?

It seems that the exchange is ordering the bulk of their items to appease the Portuguese shoppers as opposed to the US members who should be their targeted customers.

These liberal exchange privileges have been extended to host nation personnel in a spirit of friendship and cooperation between the United States and Portuguese governments, and thus play an important role in this continuation of the U.S. Forces Azores mission. Additionally, the larger customer base allows the exchange to carry a much larger selection and higher inventory levels than we could if the customer base was U.S. only.

In regards to the merchandise selections, AAFES management has been working hard to ensure the needs of the U.S. military shoppers are always met first. However, there are occasions when orders are not placed in sufficient quantities, which creates out of stocks and sometimes creates the perception merchandise is being based on the needs of the host nation shoppers.

Any time a customer sees a long term out of stock situation, please call the exchange office at Ext. 23209 or fill out a customer comment form.

Additionally, you can voice concerns to your unit representative of the BX/Commissary Advisory Board. I assure you that the AAFES management is focused on the needs of the U.S. shopper. Still, allowing host nation privileges is a win-win situation for everyone.

March is American Red Cross Month

Col. Rod Gibson
65th ABW Commander

Americans share a long tradition of compassion for others and lending aid to those in need. Since our earliest days as a nation, we have been able to bear the heartbreak of family tragedy, personal hardship, or natural disaster because of the help of caring friends and neighbors. For 117 years, the American Red Cross has been the staunchest of friends and neighbors to millions of people both here at home and around the world, adding its own vital contributions to our history of service.

The American Red Cross brings both comfort and practical assistance to the victims of more than 65,000 disasters each year, from hurricanes and tornadoes affecting thousands of people to a house fire involving a single family. Members of the Red Cross also work on the front lines of armed conflicts and disasters across the globe to relieve and restore human dignity and self-sufficiency. At the same time, they serve alongside our men and women in uniform wherever they are deployed, relaying urgent family messages and providing a precious link with home. And through its Holocaust and War Victims

Tracing and Information Center, the Red Cross has helped thousands of families in their searches for information about the fate of loved ones from whom they were separated during the Holocaust.

Few of us have remained untouched by the work of the Red Cross. The Red Cross collects, tests and distributes 6 million units of donated blood each year, nearly half the nation's supply. More than 1,300 Red Cross chapters in communities across America teach health and safety courses to 12 million people each year, providing them

Ed's continues his look at the Azorean Islands. This week... Faial.

With the shape of an irregular pentagon and an area of 67 square miles, the island of Faial is one of the most charming islands of the Azores and most demanded by tourists. With a population of approximately 15,000 people, Faial is a real watercolor picture featuring a beautiful landscape and characteristic villages placed mainly around the island.

Called Ventura island on old charts and portolanos and São Luis at the time of its discovery by Portuguese navigators, its settlement took place before 1460 and eight years later a group of Flemish headed by a nobleman called Josse van Huerter established on Faial. Even though the number of Portuguese settlers was greater, the Flemish community by 1490 numbered about 1500 people.

In 1583, as part of the occupation of the Azores, which began with the landing on Terceira Island, the Spanish fleet sailed to Faial. After some resistance by the island defenders, who were reinforced by French troops, the Spanish finally crushed the defiants and conquered the island. Faial also took an active part in the struggle between the liberals and absolutists movements in the 19th century.

Until about 1860, Faial's position in the Atlantic and the existence of a port attracted cargo boats engaged in the orange trade and American whalers, which stopped there to get supplies. During the first half of the 20th century, the island's capital, Horta, was an important center for underwater cable links between the North America and Europe and took part in the pioneer period of aviation as the first transatlantic flight stopped there in 1919 as well as the Pan American dirigibles from 1939 to 1945. A naval base in the two world wars, Horta was one of the ports used by the Allied fleet at the time of the invasion of Normandy in 1944.

Today, Faial is a developing island with an economy based in agriculture, dairy industry, fishing and trade. The construction of a marina inside the port of Horta, with capacity to hold 120 yachts, has contributed to the island's development as well.

The city of Horta, one of the centers of the Regional Government's administration and the seat of the Azorean Parliament, is also the head of the district, which includes all of the island's 13 parishes. The city celebrates its anniversary every year on July 4th with a display of fire works.

As mentioned above, Faial has a beautiful landscape. The Caldeira, a volcanic cone that dominates the island features a wide, deep crater and lake surrounded by blue hydrangeas and a luxuriant vegetation. Cabeço Gordo, the island's highest point with an altitude of approximately 3,280 feet affords magnificent views of the scenery of Faial and of the islands of Pico, São Jorge and when the sky is clear, Graciosa. The Ponta dos Capelinhos, another main tourist attraction, stands at the westernmost point of the island and from here is possible to see the effects of the volcanic eruption of Sept. 27, 1957, when a considerable area of farming land was covered by ashes. There's a small museum nearby, which recalls and documents the main phases of the eruption.

The largest tourist event of the island is undoubtedly the "Sea Week Festival" that is held in Horta during the first week of August. It originated in the reception of the Portsmouth, England-Horta regatta in 1975. The festival features sailing and swimming competitions; water polo games, etc. The week's nights are animated by concerts of various folk dance groups, marching bands and pop music groups from all over the Azores and mainland Portugal.

with knowledge regarding CPR, first aid, water safety, and HIV that can - and does - save lives.

The Red Cross has become a simple yet powerful symbol that transcends language and conveys a universally understood message of hope. This symbol draws its strength from the dedication of the more than 1.3 million volunteers who help disaster victims, assist at blood drives, teach health classes, and respond to urgent community needs. I commend the generous spirit of all those who carry out the important work of the American Red Cross, and I encourage all Americans to support their efforts - whether by giving blood, donating funds to help disaster victims, or becoming Red Cross volunteers themselves. In doing so, we ensure that the American Red Cross will continue its tradition of compassionate service into the 21st century and beyond.

Here at Lajes Field, the American Red Cross has delivered 173 emergency messages and trained 253 people in CPR, first aid and water safety since January of 1997. The Red Cross also assisted with 41 comfort kits to stranded passengers from an in-flight emergency, participated in disaster exercises and also responded to the recent crash of a Portuguese aircraft on the island.

I, Rodney E. Gibson, Commander of the 65th Air Base Wing, Lajes Field, Azores, Portugal, do hereby proclaim March 1998 as American Red Cross Month at Lajes Field.

1st Lt. Dane McKenzie
Base tax advisor

For taxpayers living and working overseas, part or all of your income may be excluded from federal income tax. Even though it is exempt from federal income tax, you are still liable for self-employment tax and you still have a requirement by the IRS to file a tax return for 1997. In order to claim the exclusion, you must elect to do so on your tax return. To qualify for the exclusion, your income must be earned income such as salaries, wages, commissions and professional fees. However, payments made by the U.S. government, to include the exchange and commissary and the club, to its employees do not qualify. For more information, call Ext. 22420 or 22421.
